Police Quell Hungry Cleveland Relief Clients

CROWDS YELL FOR FOOD AT TWO OFFICES

375,000 Pounds Butter, Flour, Fruits Received to Relieve Needy's Distress.

CITY FEARS DISORDER

16,000 Men, Women Without Rations, Officials Feed Children First.

(By United Press)

CLEVELAND — City officials ordered extra squads of police to two relief offices today to quell pushing crowds clamoring for food orders.

They said hundreds of relief clients at the Buckeye and Willson offices had formed lines they feared might be unmanageable.

While officers kept order, relief officials announced they had received 375,000 pounds of butter and additional white flour, raisins and prunes from the Surplus Commodities corporation for distribution to thousands made hungry by the latest relief crisis in this city of a million.

They believed the two dried foods might relieve the extremely starchy diet on which they said thousands had been having to subsist for several days.

Crowds were unruly yesterday before several relief offices, and relief officials said that at one a woman fell down and was trampled. Sixteen thousand men and women were without regular food orders today and others were on curtailed rations. Mayor Harold H. Burton assured them none would starve.

Burton stopped the food orders of 8,000 single persons and 4,000 childless couples on relief so that he could feed children. Relief funds were virtually gone and it appeared that none would be available before Jan. 1.

Camera Trap Set By Doctor Bags Scared Burglar

The doctor has a filling station as a sideline and had been bothered by repeated burglaries. He is a camera hobbyist and used knowledge gained therefrom to set his camera-burglar trap.

He rigged up his camera in the station, and devised an electric eye arrangement, with an infrared beam and a mirrow. The idea was that if a prowler walked through the beam, a flashbulb be set off and the camera shutter would click.

Furthermore, the light from the flash would strike a second photoelectric cell, setting off a screaching siren. No doubt the prowler would flee in terror but would leave his portrait behind.

All that happened the night of Nov. 7. Dr. Brunswick triumphantly presented a picture of the burglar to Sheriff Lester Edinger. Some days later the sheriff questioned Harold Lewis, 19, a Woodstock, Ill., farmhand, about some petty thefts.

He got out the tell-tale picture which the sheriff said was a likeness of Lewis. Yesterday the youth confessed, Edinger said.

As Auto Strike Neared End

Scenes like this are over at the Chrysler corporation's Dodge plant in Detroit—at least for awhile. Plant officials and United Automobile Workers union leaders reached an agreement today in their labor dispute and workers will return to their jobs as soon as the rank and file of employe union members ratify the agreement which provides wage increases. In the above picture 200 foundry workers at the plant are entering the plant yesterday to the jeers of more than 3,000 union pickets. The strike was called Oct. 6

Delayed Conventions For Both Parties Seen

Both Sides Jockey For Pole Positions In 1940 Presidential Race; Plan Discussed by Roosevelt.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Democrats and Republicans appeared today to be maneuvering for pole position in the 1940 presidential campaign.

After disclosure at Warm Springs, Ga., that President Roosevelt had discussed postponing nominating conventions of both parties to mid-summer, Chairman John D. M. Hamilton of the Republican National Committee said:

"It seems to me President Roosevelt is arrogating himself a great deal of authority when he undertakes to direct when the Republican party should hold its national convention.

"Of course, there is nothing novel about the suggestion that the national conventions meet later next year than usual. Republicans projected that idea many months ago. It is a matter which is receiving careful attention within our party.

"Whatever we do, however, will be done to suit the convenience of Republicans and will not be done at the suggestion of Mr. Roosevelt or any other person outside of the Republican party."

Custom has placed the Democratic national convention last, largely because Republicans have been willing to make their selection regardless of the opposition choice.

Uncertainty regarding Roosevelt's personal intentions in 1940, and the possibility that conservative and liberal Democrats may have serious convention differences, have caused some informal discussion of postponing the G. O. P. meeting until Democratic nominees are known.

"Informed sources" at Warm Springs, Ga., revealed yesterday that Roosevelt had discussed with several persons there and in Washington postponement of the Democratic convention until July 1940, or later.

FIREMAN HURT

Overcome by Smoke at Blaze; Woman Rescued.

CINCINNATI—(UP)—A fireman was overcome by smoke and an 85-year-old woman was carried from an apartment building today during a fire that caused $3,000 damage.

Fireman Walter Saul, 44, was treated in a hospital for smoke inhalation. He was overcome on a back stairway.

Mrs. Paulina A. B. Redell was taken from the building unharmed but not until after she had warned Dr. William Wolfe, sleeping on the floor below her, by pounding on the floor with a hammer.

Her son, Charles G. Redell discovered the fire. They escaped by a fire escape.

Physicians Study Substitute For 'Socialized Medicine'

A plan to offer medical care to low income groups through voluntary contributions without resorting to "socialized medicine," was being considered today by the Ohio State Medical association committees.

Dr. C. R. Damron of Mansfield, president of the Richland County Medical society and a member of one of the two committees appointed to study the proposal, termed the move "one of the most important steps ever undertaken by the medical profession of Ohio."

"It is our answer to socialized medicine," Dr. Damron said, pointing out that the plan would "work in harmony" with group hospitalization organizations which were authorized by the last legislature.

State Medical association committees on public relations and economics, and on medical service, of which Dr. Damron is a member, already have started a study to determine if there is a need or a desire for such a service.

He explained that the committees probably would not have the proposal in shape for presentation to the legislature for at least a year, due to "ramifications" of the plan.

At Columbus, Dr. Parke G. Smith of Cincinnati, president of the state association said that under the plan, persons of modest incomes would have an oppor'un-

AGREEMENT AT CHRYSLER ENDS 54-DAY STRIKE

NO WALKOUT CLAUSE OK'D

Employes Will Have Pay Hikes Totaling $5,000,000; Jobs Waiting 60,000 Men.

(By United Press)

DETROIT — Chrysler Corporation and the United Automobile Workers (CIO) ended their unprecedented 54-day dispute today with an agreement which, it was learned, provides only for a general wage increase and a modified bargaining board.

The new agreement, a responsible source said, has no provision for a union shop and the company will retain full control of production scheduled.

Only the formality of ratification by the rank and file remained before 60,000 workers, most of them idle since early in October, could go back to their jobs after the longest major labor fight in automotive history.

Since Oct. 6, when the production fight began, it was estimated that the company had lost $102,000,000 in sales and workers an estimated $15,000,000 in wages.

The agreement was on a new contract to replace one which expired Sept. 30. It is for one year, the informant said, and contains a "no strike" clause which provides that it immediately becomes void if the UAW-CIO calls a walkout during its life without resorting to all grievance procedure authorized by it.

$5,000,000 Pay Increases.

The wage increases, it was said, will mean a total annual increase in the company payroll of approximately $5,000,000. The increase per worker was said to be "in the neighborhood of three cents an hour. The union, in its original demand, asked 10 cents an hour and subsequently reduced its demand to five cents an hour.

In addition to the blanket increase, it was learned, there is to be adjustment of wages in various classifications including raising of pay in Evansville, Ind., and Marys-

FOG BLANKET

City Has 'Blackout' Provided by Mother Nature.

Mansfield this morning shook off its veil after the worst night of fog the city has experienced this year.

Nature's own "blackout" last night wrapped the city in a dense blanket of cloud formations for more than six hours, and visibility was practically zero both vertically and horizontally from midnight until dawn.

Despite hazardous conditions, however, only minor accidents were reported within the city, although buses stopping here during the early morning hours were running behind schedule.

Early morning motorists literally "felt" their way. Street lights appeared like tiny beads through film. Until past daylight when the sun attempted to break through the fog Mansfield was "blacked out" almost as completely as any European city during an air raid.

KUHN'S FATE UP TO JURORS NOW

Branded 'Liar, Thief' by State, Persecuted Man by Defense, He Faces Long Term.

(By International News Service)

NEW YORK — Branded a "liar and common thief" by the prosecution and pictured by the defense as a much-wronged individual persecuted for political and racial reasons, Fritz Kuhn may know some time today which description has registered with the jury trying him on larceny and forgery charges.

Judge James G. Wallace was to deliver his charge today and then the jury was to retire and consider a verdict. A 30-year maximum sentence is possible if Kuhn is found guilty on all counts.

The state says that Kuhn is a thief and a liar and that he made a "personal racket" out of the Bund and appropriated its monies to his own purposes.

It holds up the testimony of Mrs. Florence Camp to show that Kuhn spent Bund funds on her and to show that he lied even to this woman, he claimed to love, by setting a wedding date he had no intention of keeping.

The state says further that Kuhn made a false entry in the Bund checkbook (second degree forgery) indicating that he had drawn a $500 check for Attorney James D. C. Murray and that he actually pocketed the money (larceny.)

The "leadership principle" as brought out in the case is labeled a "fabricated and floating defense" which denies itself because the witnesses who swore to it also admitted that there was a limit to Kuhn's powers and that the membership could even impeach him.

Borah warned that "you can destroy the citizenship of a country, its morale and its worth almost as effectively through taxation as you can through war."

Wheeler, likewise criticising the chief executive's suggestions that a national defense tax might be desirable, declared he did not believe the country would stand for any further burden on the "little fellow."

HUNT 2 IN THEFT OF $1,350 COAT

Police Seek Shoplifter Who Took Mink Fur From Store During Lunch Hour.

Police were looking today for two women shoplifters who are suspected of having stolen a mink coat valued at $1,350 from a fur salesman at the R. B. Maxwell store yesterday noon.

The coat disappeared between noon and 1 p. m. and the loss was discovered immediately after the two women had left the department, store officials said. They believe it was the work of a "professional" since the most expensive coat in a lot of more than 100 was taken.

A New York fur house had been displaying the furs at the store for two days. The garment stolen was unlined and soft so that it could have been easily folded, store officials said.

Police said the theft occured at a time when most of the clerks and the fur salesman were at lunch, and that only two saleswomen were on the floor with the display of furs which was valued in excess of $40,000.

The two women entered the department to look for dresses and had a dress laid away on a lay-away account. The address given was false, police said.

Police Chief Meade K. Bates said that detectives had worked on the case throughout the night and that several women had been brought in for questioning. They were released when clerks of the store failed to identify them.

Bates said the coat was insured.

Learn $14,400 Relief 'Gift' Can Be Used for Current Bills

Mansfield and Richland county, which were allocated $14,402 in state relief funds last week, were informed today that they can use the money for current relief bills.

Released by an attorney general's ruling, the funds will be a Christmas present for the city and county since the money comes unexpectedly and will help to pay relief costs for the rest of the year.

City and county officials had not been sure whether the funds could be used for current expenses or had to be held in reserve to retire outstanding relief bonds.

The ruling provides that the money can be spent for December relief bills or to pay old bills which may have accumulated because of lack of relief funds.

County Auditor Norman L. Wolfe said the money will be allocated by the state relief examiner on the basis of the subdivision's relief costs last month.

Mansfield, which always tops all other county districts in relief costs, is in line for the largest share of the funds.

The total county allocation is a part of a $1,878,420 fund which will be distributed to Ohio counties and cities. The money represents utility taxes in excess of the amount needed as a reserve for relief bonds.

Tiny Nation Denies Her Army Being Mobilized to Meet Soviet Invasion.

BULLETIN

STOCKHOLM —(INS)— Indicating a turn for the worse in the Russo-Finnish problem, Laurence A. Steinhardt, United States ambassador to Moscow, cut short his visit to Scandinavia this afternoon and engaged a special plane to fly him to Riga en route to Moscow.

(By International News Service)

STOCKHOLM—Greeted by cheers of "crush the Finnish war-mongers" from the population, streams of Soviet Russian troops moved toward the Finnish frontier today, according to reports from Leningrad.

Reports in Stockholm indicated the Russians plan almost immediate seizure of the unfortified islands of Hogland, Seitskaer and Tytskaer in the Gulf of Finland, then perhaps pressing toward the Karelian isthmus in an invasion of the Finnish mainland.

This thrust into Finland, the reports said, is contemplated from the Estonian City of Baltic port, now occupied by Soviet troops.

Swedish authorities are considerably concerned over Russia's next step, and this apprehension is growing in Finland as well. Direct dispatches from Helsingfors, however, again denied that Finnish troops had been mobilized.

Well-informed diplomatic observers continue to believe that war will be averted, but they are equally convinced that Finland will fight to the last man if the issue is drawn.

It was understood in Stockholm that Finland's reply to Soviet Rus-

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

Suddenly I felt a sickening revulsion for the whole thing. Sometime I might be able to hear it, if Dicky should continue to have what Lillian calls a "persistent yen for confession." But I felt as if I could not listen to another word now.

Curiously enough, considering usual feminine reaction, I felt no rancor toward my husband, no doubt of him. The terrible danger which had hung over him had been too recently dispelled for me to forget the horror of it, or to cease to revel in the bliss of deliverance from it. But hear any more of this sordid plot—I was sure it was sordid—I would not.

I sprang up from my chair, crossed to Dicky who had also risen with astonishment in his face, and put my hands on his shoulders.

"Please, Dicky!" I pleaded. "Don't tell me any more—at least, not now."

The lines in his face deepened, and his eyes were suddenly tortured.

"I was afraid of this," he said dully, "and I can't blame you. I suppose you've guessed, and it is a sordid story. But I had hoped—"

I took his shoulders in a firmer grip and shook them, smiling at him the while. Then I put one hand over his lips.

"Hush! darling," I said, as I might have talked to Junior. "You are utterly mistaken in my meaning. I have no doubts of you. This story, whatever it may be, can make no difference in my love for you, or my trust in you, but I just can't hear any more now."

His arms went suddenly around me, and he caught me to him in a strong, fervent embrace.

"You loyal darling!" he exclaimed huskily. "You'd put life into a moribund. But"—his voice was suddenly stubborn—"I can let you off hearing this now, if you're fed up with it. But I can't let you off for good. Some time or other you'll have to hear this, and you mustn't give your verdict until you do. I never shall feel shriven else."

"Just as you like," I told him, "but you can be sure there will be no change in my verdict."

"Please God!" Dicky murmured, and as I heard the reverent little plea, there flashed over me a curious revulsion of feeling, one of which I was thoroughly ashamed, but which I could not control.

I shall always be proud that I was able to preserve a "poker face," and give no slightest hint of the turmoil within me. And then, as if by direct intervention from Providence, saving me further speech or action, there was a knocking on the under part of the trapdoor, and I went swiftly to the outer door of the apartment and called Gus, who had been stationed in the hall.

"Come and open the trapdoor," I said. "There is a signal."

Gus came promptly, but did not at once open the door. Evidently no possible precaution against treachery was left unheeded in this labyrinth of secret rooms. He leaned down and rapped several times, short and long knocks, then stopped and listened. An answering series of knocks came, and not until they had finished did he lift the trapdoor in the floor, to reveal Edith and Lillian standing on the stairs beneath, their heads just below the level of the door.

"Good man, Gus!" Lillian commended. "You don't do things until you are sure."

Gus flushed with pleasure.

"I find it don't ever pay," he said simply, and Lillian nodded assent, and turned to Edith.

"You're all in, Ede," she said kindly, yet with something in her tone that savored of contempt. "Sit down until we can plan what we are all to do. What about you? Do you want to come to the farm with us?"

But there was no answer from Edith. Instead, to our horror she broke into a paroxysm of sobs.

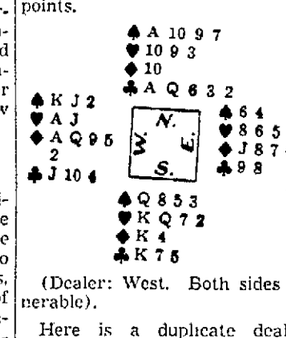
FAVOR TOPLESS SUITS

MORE AND more evidence piles up on the value of bidding suits without strong tops and having your principal honors on the side. If you find your partner fitting the suit, with a high honor in his hand, you are likely to be doubled by an opponent who mistakenly believes his own honors have a positional advantage over yours. When he does this, he may be presenting you with some extra points.



(Dealer: West. Both sides vulnerable).

Here is a duplicate deal on which the best scores came to the South players, who preferred to bid their spades before their hearts. In all cases West bid 1-Diamond and North 2-Clubs. Where South now bid 2-Spades, North went to three and South to 4-Spades, which West doubled because he thought his honors were well placed. Where South bid 2-Hearts over North's 2-Clubs, North then bid 2-Spades and South 4-Spades. The latter sequence of bidding made it appear as if North had the spade honors and therefore there was no double by West.

As it turns out, there is no earthly way for West to take more than one trick each in spades, hearts and diamonds, so that the people who got doubled profited thereby.

Hard work, ceaseless application novel or original methods, as well as the support of strangers or of others in powerful places, may culminate in removing difficulties and frustrations. But be cautious with writings and documents and adopt diplomacy rather than contention in tight situations. Aim at high goals.

Those whose birthday it is are assured a year of outstanding accomplishments and fulfillments in spite of many tenacious obstacles, delays and disappointments, although these, if managed with ingenuity, application and determination, will assist in giving stability to the future and its destiny. Attention to detail and practical plans may attract the substantial support of either strangers or others in power, whose promotional endorsement is needed.

A child born on this day may be industrious, practical and clever at devising new ways with old systems, thus promoting its plans, fortunes and personal standing.

Friends Told How Wonderful Vendol Is For Constipation
Springfield Lady Now Says She Can Recommend This Great Medicine Because It Made Her Feel Better Than For Many a Day.

MRS. CLARA YOUNG
"I heard, and often read in the papers, about what Vendol was doing for men and women right here and in nearby towns, and feeling the need of such a medicine I decided to give it a trial to see if it would help me the same way, and it did everything I expected of it," says Mrs. Clara Young of 734 Reed Ave., Springfield, Ohio.
"My troubles were all due to constipation which made me suffer from acid dyspepsia, sour stomach, gas pains, shortness of breath, and also sometimes made me feel dizzy and I'd see little spots dancing before my eyes. Every morning I'd wake up with a bad taste in my mouth, tongue coated, and an unpleasant breath.
"Vendol and the little Vendol laxative tablets gave the most wonderful relief from my constipation that I'd found anywhere; then, the other troubles disappeared very fast until now I am never troubled like I was before with sour stomach and the others.
"Vendol relieved the constipation so nicely that I enjoy restful sleep and awaken ready for my day's work. It has done me so much good that I expect to continue taking it for a while longer, I think it a wonderful medicine."
Make up your mind now to begin taking Vendol and see for yourself what it will do. Come to Central Drug Store, Cor. Main and Fourth Sts., ask for me, the Vendol Man, and I'll explain all about my grand medicine and tell you honestly what you may expect it to do for you. Come today if possible.—Adv.

Ex-Communist Insists Youth Congress Communistic

SAYS GROUP DIRECTED BY RED LEADERS

Mrs. Roosevelt's Offer to Give Her Testimony Still Passed Up.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — William G. Ryan, of Milwaukee, who described himself as a former Communist party member, repeated before the Dies committee today his contention that the American Youth Congress was a Communist "front" organization.

This assertion, previously made by several committee witnesses and also denied by some, was described by Ryan as "a generally accepted fact."

"All Communists know it," he testified. He said he had not worked in the Youth Congress but had talked to Communists who had.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has addressed the Youth Congress and has asserted — although not before the committee—that she knew it was not Communist controlled.

This week she offered to testify provided the committee thought she had any information of value. The committee has not acted on the offer.

Ryan said that the majority of members of the congress were not Communist party members.

Cites Other Groups.

"The Communists exercise control through small minorities," he said.

The same was true, he declared, of the American League for Peace and Democracy, the American Negro Congress, the American Students Union, Friends of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade, North American Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy, and Friends of the Soviet Union.

VERMONT FARMER DESCRIBES 4,000 MILE VOYAGE IN CANOE

(By Associated Press)

SAN FRANCISCO—A 45-year-old Vermont farmer was back in the United States today with awesome story of how he and two other Americans sailed a 29foot outrigger canoe 4,000 miles from Honolulu to Samoa.

He is Capt. U. A. Woodbury, who said he left his farm in Vermont two years ago and sailed a 35-foot boat to Hawaii when he felt the call of the sea.

After sitting around Honolulu for a while, Woodbury bought a 100-year-old native canoe, fitted it with a steel pontoon designed to hold 80 gallons of gasoline for an outboard motor, and christened it Lealca-Lani.

Don Hall of Long Beach, Cal., and Charles Kern of Rhode Island joined Woodbury as a crew and the three set out April 19 after a few weeks of test runs with the frail craft.

"The trip was more or less like riding a log," said Woodbury yesterday.

"We were under water a good deal of the time. It became commonplace to see a wave coming over us. If we were smoking we'd just hold up one hand, so the cigaret wouldn't get wet.

"The water rotted our clothes to pieces."

Woodbury said the canoe sailed so smoothly before the wind that sometimes they had to slow her down by taking in sail. They never once had to use the motor.

Sharks followed the tiny canoe all the way across.

"Once, when we were hungry," he related, "we speared a baby shark, but he broke the spear. The others saw the blood and they tore him and our ideas of a meal to bits."

OHIO EDITORS DISCUSS RELIEF WITH BRICKER

Long Session Fails to Bring Forth Any Plan to Aid State's Needy.

(By International News Service)

COLUMBUS, O.—A meeting between editors of Ohio's metropolitan newspapers and state officials failed to bring forth today any tangible plan for solving relief problems in industrial areas or a promise from Governor Bricker that a special session might be called in the near future to aid needy.

Editors of 14 large newspapers met with Governor Bricker, Welfare Director Charles L. Sherwood and State Finance Director R. R. Bangham for several hours yesterday, with the result, apparently, that relief remained a purely local problem.

Neither the editors nor state officials would comment about the conference, except to say that they had "discussed the relief problem from every angle."

"We're just where we were before the meeting," one Cleveland editor commented.

"All I can see is that the problem is back in the laps of the local communities," another declared.

Two Hit Hardest.

Cleveland and Toledo are hit hardest by relief crises.

In the case of Toledo, where 5,000 were said to be suffering from lack of food, fuel and clothing, three sources of revenue loomed as the only hope for feeding the needy until the end of the year.

These, according to Grove Patterson, editor of the Toledo Blade, were: $170,000 from the auto license tax fund, $263,000 from a proposed sale of bonds in anticipation of the collection of delinquent taxes, and $83,000 from the surplus excise tax fund.

Cleveland is attempting to feed its hungry thousands on reduced rations most from a fund of $300,000 available from surplus excise taxes.

County Sends 100 To Convention of Ohio Farm Bureau

Nearly 100 representatives of the Richland County Farm Bureau and county rural residents were in Columbus today for the annual convention of the Ohio Farm Bureau. The sessions will continue through Thursday.

Forty Farm Bureau officials and members made the trip in a chartered bus, leaving the Mansfield headquarters of the organization at 8 a. m. today. The Mansfield, Shelby, Bellville and Lexington offices of the Farm Bureau were closed today to permit employes to attend the state meet.

Because the Richland county farm organization has a larger membership than any other in the state, it sent four delegates to the state convention, more than any other county.

Spurned, He Stabs Sweetheart, Runs Car Over Rival

MAN, 38, TAKES OWN LIFE; TWO VICTIMS LIVING

Fear Couple Doomed; Girl, 25, Wounded Seven Times With Knife.

(By United Press)

LOS ANGELES — William Leach's last hope had not been realized today but county hospital physicians had all but despaired for the life of Miss Beverly Wager whom he stabbed in a frenzy of jealousy.

His last hope, scrawled in pencil in a note as carbon monoxide gas slowly carried him into a death stupor, was that she "Dies the death of a rag doll." He had stabbed her seven times a few hours earlier.

His suicide notes—there were three of them—did not mention Keith Helmick, the man who caused her to spurn his love. He evidently believed he had succeeded in killing him. He stabbed Helmick several times with a pocket knife and one of his slashes struck his victim's spine and paralyzed him. Then he made a juggernaut of his automobile and ran it back and forth over Helmick.

Leach, 39, a movie studio employe, had been enamored of Miss Wager, who is 25, for months, her friends said. She was his sweetheart until she met the younger man, Helmick, 29. Then she quit him and she and Helmick announced their approaching marriage.

Embittered and thirsting for vengeance, he lured the couple to his home for "a round of congratulatory drinks." The drinks were poured but never taken, Miss Wager said. He fell upon them like a mad man, wielding the long-bladed pocket knife.

Victim Fought Back.

Helmick scuffled, but he was no match for the flashing knife. He fell paralyzed by a wound in the vertebra.

Leach then turned upon Miss Wager, who had been fighting for her lover's life all the while. He stabbed her seven times in the arms and body. Two thrusts punctured her lungs. She, too, fell.

To make certain of a full vengeance on Helmick, Leach got his car from the garage and drove it back and forth over Helmick as he lay prostrated. Miss Wager said the wheels crunched over him at least three times while she lay helpless, screaming.

Leach left his car and went into his house where he wrote his first note, one to his wife, Mrs. Florence Leach, of Chicago. It said that he was committing suicide by leaping from "some high place," police said. He evidently drove to the high place, but lost his nerve. His final stop was on lonely Mandalay beach, 60 miles from Los Angeles.

Here police found his car, his body inside.

Two Ohio Cities Rank High In Cost Of Living Survey

WASHINGTON — (UP) — Cleveland ranks fifth highest and Cincinnati sixth among 32 large American cities in the cost of living, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported today.

The Cleveland index stood at 85.8 and Cincinnati's 85.5 on Sept. 15, a survey showed. The national index, with the years 1923-25 as the 100 base, was 82.7. The figures incuded costs of food, clothing, rent, fuel, light, household furnishings and miscellaneous items.

Cities which showed higher living costs were Washington, Baltimore, San Francisco and Seattle.

Fuel and light costs in Cleveland, with an index of 112.6, were the highest in the country, the bureau said. The national index for these items was 86.1.

From June 15 to Sept. 15, living costs increased 1.2 per cent in Cincinnati and .1 per cent in Cleveland, the study showed. The national increase during the three-months' period was 1.2 per cent.

CCC RANKS OPEN

County to Send New Contingent To Camps In January.

A new contingent of Richland county enrollees in the Civilian Conservation corps will be sent to CCC camps in January, Mrs. Agatha Leonard, county selecting agent said today.

Enrollment of young men between the ages of 18 and 23 is now under way. Mrs Leonard will be at the city-county relief office, 28 Orange street, Monday to receive applications. After that date applicants will be required to make appointments with the selecting agent.

Budget Economy Forces Cut In Army Plans

Up and Down THE STREET

Herman D. Bishop, assistant principal of Senior high school, will leave his role of school executive tomorrow and Friday to act as a school inspector and visit the Union Rural high schools at Rushville and Breman, O., in Fairfield county. Bishop will make the inspection with several other Ohio prinicpals and assistants as a part of the seminar work in which he is enrolled at Ohio State university.

It must be' the Christmas spirit (or somethin') that has inspired a new but noisy fad among Mansfield high school girls. They're now wearing miniature bells on their shoes, but not in the classrooms. They wore them to classes at first, but realizing the confusion, discarded the noise-makers without a warning, Principal Jesse Beer said.

* * *

The former Mansfield school associates of Buddy Simon, 17, who went to California more than two years ago to make his home, will envy his "break." Buddy is a member of the Piedmont high school football team which is being sent to Hawaii for a two-week vacation next month by the city. Other reports from the coast are to the effect that Buddy's father, Carl Simon, who has many friends here, went on a hunting trip recently with two other hunters and their wives and they bagged 24 wild geese.

* * *

You probably couldn't do so well in your shopping but $9 will buy five pairs of new shoes, according to the Service League which is moving heaven and earth—well, figuratively—to obtain shoes for school children who are desperately in need of them. The league buys the shoes at a big discount, hence the bargain prices. Mrs. E. R. Black, West Second street, president of the league, says they'll be glad either to get the money for the shoes or to repair shoes that are given to them.

U. S. Officials Hear Story of Defendant in Cemetery Lot Sale Trials.

(By Associated Press)

CINCINNATI — Trial of 12 men accused of mail fraud and conspiracy in the sale of cemetery lots took a new turn today with a government announcement that an investigation would be conducted into charges of Morton Gilbert that he was offered money "to keep my mouth shut."

James J. Walters, assistant U. S. attorney general, said "the charge has been placed in the hands of proper authorities and will be investigated promptly."

A co-defendant in the case, Gilbert was brought here from the Atlanta, Ga., federal penitentiary where he is serving a sentence imposed last spring on other charges of mail fraud and conspiracy.

Testifying yesterday, he said, "I have been offered money, even in the court room to keep my mouth shut."

Meantime, the government continued to parade its witnesses before a jury in the U. S. district court of Judge Mac Swinford.

Miss Sally W. Tinsley, a South Charleston, O., school teacher, was called to testify today.

Yesterday a country doctor, A. C. Baker of Brookville, O., testified that he and his wife had invested $21,500 in a burial plot development and had not received "a cent in return."

The government charges Gilbert and others fleeced persons throughout the midwest of $1,200,000 through sale of burial plots.

PERRYSVILLE INFANT DIES

Thursday at the home here. Rev. George M. Schrack, pastor of St. John's Lutheran church will officiate, and burial will be in Greenlawn cemetery.

$7,500 BASEBALL STAR'S PLEA FOR JOBLESS BENEFITS REFUSED

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND — Ken Keltner, Cleveland third baseman, today tried to forget his unsuccessful bid for jobless benefits, major league owners breathed easier and baseball's "bench jockeys" loaded up with 1940 ammunition.

Keltner, who makes about $7,500 a year with the Indians, applied for state job insurance of $15 a week on the contention he is unemployed this winter. In refusing, the Ohio Unemployment Compensation bureau explained Keltner was under a year's contract and so had not separated from his employment.

The ruling averted a problem for owners of baseball clubs. If Keltner had been granted the approximately $240 in benefits, they probably would have been forced to revise their player contracts, distributing the pay over 12 months instead of concentrating it in the six-month season.

"Bench jockeys," the game's term for heckling players on other teams, probably will relish the incident as the foundation for "ribbing" the Tribe's infielder next year.

At his Milwaukee home Keltner said:

"I didn't know I had any compensation coming until about two weeks ago. As soon as I found out I wasn't entitled to any, I withdrew the claim. The whole thing was just a big joke."

The state bureau, which had disallowed the claim prior to Keltner's withdrawal, said benefits also had been denied two players from Columbus' American association team.

Applicants who satisfy the bureau they have no jobs but are willing to work are entitled to $15 a week up to a maximum of 16 weeks. Contributions to the fund come solely from employers, who forward three per cent of each worker's salary.

ILLNESS FATAL

Fred Kilper Succumbs in Willard Hospital at Age 75.

WILLARD—Fred Kilper, 75, a lifelong resident of Richmond township, west of here, died Tuesday night at Municipal hospital following a brief illness. He had been confined to the hospital since Sunday.

Surviving are two brothers, E. C. Kilper of Willard and Christ of Fitchville. Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Thursday at the Fink funeral home. Other arrangements are incomplete.

GETS CONTRACT FOR GRADE JOB

Mansfield Firm Awarded Crossing Project in Hardin County.

The Purdy Construction company of Mansfield today had been awarded a contract for a grade crossing elimination project on route 30S in Hardin county on a bid of $113,342. Cost of the job was estimated at $130,770.

More than $475,000 worth of highway construction work went begging for lack of bids, Robert S. Beightler, state highway director, said. He attributed the refusal of contractors to bid on the jobs to the "uncertainty over material deliveries and labor costs due to the European war.

"We just won't let contracts if prices become prohibitive," Beightler asserted.

DEFENSE FORCE OF 500,000 MEN SEEN FOR 1940

Funds for Protecting U. S. to Reach $2,200,000,000 Despite Slashes.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — President Roosevelt's plan to economize on regular appropriations in the 1941 budget, it was learned today, will force the army to abandon plans for a protective army of 600,000 regulars and national guardsmen.

Officials said that although the national defense budget would reach a record-breaking $2,200,000,000, it was smaller than had been predicted in some informed quarters and probably would allow the army to increase its present strength of 462,000 to only 500,000 men.

The army's original expansion proposal, it was said, called for increasing regular personnel from 227,000 to 280,000 men and national guard membership from 235,000 to 320,000. Such an increase, it was estimated, would cost approximately $1,900,000,00.

But the army's share of the $2,200,000,000 national defense budget, it was indicated, would approximate only $1,200,000,000. This amount probably would allow an increase of only 40,000 in regular strength and no increase in the national guard.

Replace Old Planes.

A budget of $1,200,000,000, it was believed, would be sufficient to equip the 500,000 initial protective force, add 200 long-range bombers to the army's present air program to attain 5,500 planes by July 1, 1941, and replace 400 obsolete planes.

Both Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring and Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson have insisted that full equipment of troops is more important than bringing the army to full peacetime strength. They would prefer an adequately equipped, smaller army to a larger one without modern equipment.

Plans to abandon the 600,000 initial protective force figure was revealed shortly after Roosevelt told a press conference at Warm Springs, Ga., yesterday that he expected to submit a $2,200,000,000 national defense budget — $500,000,000 larger than for the current year—but that he would institute a double entry ssytem for those funds.

Fugitive 18 Months Brought Here From Chicago.

An Ohio state reformatory inmate who escaped from the institution farm a year and a half ago was back behind the walls of the prison today with two years additional time to serve.

The fugitive is Andrew Szinjonas, 20, Cuyahoga county burglar, who was returned yesterday by guards from Chicago.

He was taken into custody on his release from the Cook county jail where he had served a six months term for burglary.

Supt. Arthur L. Glattke said Szinjonas would be required to serve two years additional time as penalty for his escape. He was sentenced to the reformatory on Mar. 24, 1937 to serve from one to 15 years for burglary and larceny. He escaped May 14, 1938.

FAIR ENOUGH!

For Three Years Pegler Heard Bioff Was Pander, Now Records Prove It

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—Willie Bioff, the Chicago pander who muscled into control of the moving picture projectors throughout the United States and of the studio trades and crafts in Hollywood, answers the disclosure of his true character with some irrelevant remarks. He can't deny that he is a pander or that he still owes all but eight days of a six-month sentence and a $300 fine for pandering, because these facts are of record. He can't plead any technicality, because the record proves that he received $29 in a specific instance, the earnings of a prostitute inmate of a brothel in which he admitted that he was a bartender and in which the state contended he was a partner. No two ways about it. Bioff was a pander by trade and by deliberate choice.

Bioff attempts to create a belief that the disclosure of this record at this particular time was part of a plot to embarrass pending negotiations on behalf of the union which he represents, the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Operators. He says it is an attempt to discredit him.

In the latter contention Bioff is inexact. However, if his own record discredits him that is another matter.

* * *

"He is known as an associate of well-known gangsters," says a report written by Lieut. James Egan of the Chicago police, assigned to the state's attorney's office and detailed in the investigation of rackets. He has been known to members of the Chicago police department for the last 20 years. He is a thoroughly vicious hoodlum and has always been with gangsters."

Lieut. Egan reports that Bioff has been known also as Harry Martin, Harry Morton and Morris Bioff, and the papers in his appeal from the pandering conviction reveal that his name has been spelled as Bihoff and Bauff.

As to the opportune or inopportune timing of the disclosure, these are the facts:

Tom Courtney, state's attorney of Cook county, including Chicago, has no initiative in the matter. I gauged the facts out of the official records and laid them before Courtney complete. Up to that moment Courtney had no suspicion that Bioff still owed time, but under the circumstances Courtney had no choice but to proceed to extradite Bioff from California and compel him to finish his sentence for one of the foulest offenses, if not the vilest offense, of all.

* * *

How did I happen to select this time to expose Bioff? For three years I had been receiving communications and hearing casual remarks that Bioff was a pander. Two years ago an inquiry brought the information that he had a record of several arrests but no data on a conviction.

Last summer, when Bioff and George Browne, the president of the union, were attempting to kidnap the rich unions of stage, movie and radio actors, the rumors were revived, but still nobody would take responsibility for a flat accusation. And only a month ago, in San Francisco, Carey McWilliams, a member of the administration of Governor Olsen of California, said he, too, believed Bioff was a pander but had no proof. McWilliams represents a CIO group opposing Bioff's union in Hollywood.

Therefore, the next time I was in Chicago, which was last week, I determined to run down the truth. The inquiry, step by step, proved that Bioff was convicted in a specific case of taking $29 which a woman had earned by prostitution with 13 men in one day. It further proved—and surprisingly—that he had not served his sentence. He had been allowed to resume his career in association with well-known Chicago gangsters, the sentence being conveniently forgotten. As to why it was forgotten or whether other equally vicious felons are at large owing time on sentences that were not enforced, an official inquiry is in order.

Meanwhile I have received many letters, unfortunately anonymous, from persons purporting to be members of various Bioff unions pleading for publicity regarding the union's treatment of its own members.

Meanwhile, also, individual members of the Newsreel Photographers' union have told me that they were compelled to pay an initiation fee of $1,000 and an income tax of 10 per cent of their gross salary to work at their own trade. They have been afraid to permit their names to be used in criticism of Bioff or Browne lest they be thrown out of the union and thus barred from their occupation or beaten up or killed.

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—There are Cinderellas among films as well as in them.

Some months ago a young Episcopalian minister from Minnesota came to town and tried to interest the major studios in his conviction that a good religious picture, if entertaining, would be a good bet.

The Rev. James K. Friedrich, however, failing to find a sympathetic major ear, dug into his own jeans (he'd inherited a little money) and organized his own company. In course of production, "The Great Commandment" developed from a two-reel project into a featurette, thence into a feature.

It was a good one. Dana Burnet had written the script and Irving Pichel had directed it. It carried a timely message smack out of the Good Book.

* * *

And the other day, the Cinderella movie went to the ball. Darryl Zanuck, a Prince Charming in power if not in beauty, picked up the slipper.

And "The Great Commandment," bought by Zanuck's company, may emerge as a colossal—either elaborated or entirely remade, with the original film withheld from release. The plans are not yet definite in this respect. What is definite is that the minister and his associates have reaped a nice profit on the deal and will assist in the revision, whatever form it takes.

Principal "fault" of the movie in its present form is considered the lack of star names, an admitted commercial handicap. Premonitory shudders at what might happen (as long as 20th's immortal threesome of Power-Faye-Ameche are available) are calmed somewhat by the reflection that the Rev. Mr. Friedrich is a determined young man, who sincerely and staunchly believes in what he is doing, and that Pichel is likewise a sound restraining influence.

The star-name argument may seem rather odd when you glance at the cast of "Grapes of Wrath," now under way in dogged secrecy on the same Zanuck's lot.

Aside from Henry Fonda, a growing draw but not at last reports near the "first ten" in box-office power, there isn't a real "name" in the lot. Here's a picture which has been cast to type rather than to put a few contract people to work. Excellent actors all—Jane Darwell, Charley Grapewin, Zeffie Tilbury, John Carradine, Russell Simpson, John Qualen, Eddie Quillan, Dorris Bowdon—but scarcely a marquee-decorator among them.

* * *

Lillie Messinger, RKO story editor, told me of her recent experience with a man who thought his adventures in world travel should entitle him to a place on the studio writing list. Miss Messinger, who is tender-hearted, had difficulty convincing him that his incidents, however interesting, could have no film value unless they were incorporated into dramatic story form. She was, of course, quite right.

AUGMENTED by bucket slingers on the football squad, Mansfield high school's 1939-40 basketball team started to take shape today.

Coach Vern Hoffman, late of Bellvue, who succeeds J. Russell Murphy as head of the basketball department, has issued equipment to 50 players, but only a few are experienced.

HOFFMAN

The Tygers are scheduled to lift their schedule with Columbus South Friday, Dec. 8, but will stage a preview this coming Friday with the Alumni team.

Hoffman, who has been assisting Coach Paul Snyder in football, has been delayed in setting plans for the court season in which the Tygers are faced by one of the toughest schedules in history, but expects to have his squad in fairly good shape by next week.

The new mentor's big task is to assemble a first-string five, and this will be difficult as few of the returning lettermen have seen much service outside of Gene Rudolph, who will be eligible only until mid-season; Don Rose, Russ Beer and Bill Herpich.

Dave Shelley, Jack Lyons, Tommy Scott, Ike Smith and Dick Nagle, who were the mainstays in the Tygers' drive to the district title last season, have graduated, and Jack Dugger, another member of the 1938-39 quintet, has transferred to Canton McKinley.

One of the newcomers who has shown promise is Gene Miller, who held down an end on Snyder's eleven. Miller, tall and rangy, is expected to fit into Hoffman's scheme of things.

At this writing, Rudolph, Miller, Beer, Rose, Herpich, Chuck Atton, Dave Prion, Jack Shiplet, Harry Phillips and Joe Kieffer loom as the standouts.

They will be given the preference in the selection of starters for the early games, at least.

* * *

Hoffman's Tygers Feature Fast Break.

THE TYGERS this season will feature a more spectacular type of game than played by the Murphy-coached quintets.

Hoffman is a champion of the fast offensive break, and this is the type of basketball in which he is drilling his charges at present. Murphy was an advocate of the slow break.

Hoffman's style of play will make the game considerable faster, and, consequently, develop more scoring.

The Tygers this year will play 18 games, with five of the foes being state tournament participants. District champions to be faced by the bengal quintet are Canton McKinley, Findlay, Massillon, Hamilton and New Philadelphia.

New Teams on the schedule this season are Elyria, Findlay, and Toledo Libbey.

Among the district rivals on the card are Sandusky, Shelby, Ashland, Willard, and Bellevue, where Hoffman coached last year.

The schedule follows:

Another Columbus boy, Carl Hughes, 137, should find plenty of trouble awaiting him when he crawls through the ropes to face Beauford Glover of the settlement. Glover, incidentally, suffered a hip injury in a training session recently, and may not be in top shape, but it should be an interesting battle. The bout will be the semi-final on the program.

Pelicans Cut Tribe Tie-Up

Indians May Go to Coast to Train Next Spring.

CLEVELAND—(AP)—The Cleveland Indians went shopping today for a spring training base. Vice President C. C. Slapnicka said final decision on 1940 practice grounds would depend on developments at New Orleans, where the Redskins have trained for several years.

* * *

The Louisiana club announced last night that it was severing relations with the Indians, apparently meaning the Tribe would have to go elsewhere this spring.

* * *

A. B. Freeman, acting president of the Southern Association team, said in New Orleans that Roger Peckinpaugh had resigned as manager, and that a new club working agreement was being arranged with the St. Louis Cardinals. Peckinpaugh, former Cleveland manager, has been developing players for the Indians.

Slapnicka expressed surprise at Freeman's announcement, but indicated if the Indians moved it would be to the Pacific coast.

PLAY HERSHEY BEARS

CLEVELAND — Cleveland's hockey Barons, having split a two-game series with the Syracuse Stars over the week-end, settled down to daily practice sessions in preparation for two games with the Hershey Bears. The Barons tangle with Hershey at Hershey, Pa., Saturday night and return home Sunday evening to meet the same team on Arena ice.

NILE WINS TROPHY

NEW YORK—(INS)—The Heisman Memorial trophy, awarded annually to the season's outstanding college football player, will go this year to Iowa's sensational back, Nile Clark Kinnick, jr. Kinnick polled 651 points in a nationwide vote of sports writers and broadcasters, it was announced today.

GENERAL LIST UP FRACTIONS IN QUIET MART

Steels, Motors Among Issues in Black After Opening; Aircrafts Lag.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Most leading issues moved half-heartedly ahead in the stock market today.

The opening was quiet and the ticker tape continued to loaf. After the opening gains were measured in fractions.

In the black were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, New York Central General Electric, U. S. Rubber and Kennecott.

Aircrafts were inclined to lag. Commodities were mixed. Bonds tended higher, with U. S. Treasury issues in the lead.

Important overnight news included settlement of the 54-day-old dispute between the Chrysler Corporation and the United Automobile Workers' union which has made idle 60,000 workers. It was expected production in the stopped plants would resume within three or four days.

"Iron Age" reported there was a leveling off in new steel business which may be accentuated by the fact shipments of some products can be deferred until after Jan 1 without loss.

Electric power production for the week ended Nov. 25, dipped a little from the preceding week but was still 13.6 per cent higher than for the 1938 comparative.

Percentage gains over a year ago were highest in the New England, central industrial and southern regions.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Refuse anything else. At all drug stores. 10c and 25c.

HELD AFTER CAR HITS TRESTLE

Driver Treated for Minor Injuries, Charged With Intoxication.

Ray Kochenderfer, R. F. D. 2, Greenwich, was treated at Mansfield General hospital early this morning for minor cuts and bruises received when his car struck a trestle and barricade on North Main street. Police later arrested him on a charge of intoxication.

The trestle was broken and Kochenderfer agreed to pay for the damage. His car was towed to a garage and police took him to the hospital. In municipal court this morning he asked that his case be continued until Friday.

Two others facing intoxication charges were assessed three times the ordinary fine in court today. Howard Ward, Mansfield, was fined $15 and costs for intoxication, when police testified he had been abusive when he was arrested. Clayton Bachelder, Bellville, received a similar fine. He was arrested by deputy sheriffs who found him in a field and his car wrecked in a ditch near Possum Run golf course.

SAYS U. S. IN WAR HARMFUL

Taft Declares Nation Could Not Help Democracy's Cause.

TULSA, Okla. — (AP) — Senator Robert A. Taft (R-Ohio), candidate for the presidential nomination, said last night the United States would "do more harm than good to democracy by going in to aid the allies" in the European hostilities.

"If we stay out of their fights, they will soon attempt to emulate us and our form of government," he told a group of Republicans.

The "war scare is over" in this country, he added. "The situation in the World war is not paralleled in this instance. Then there was a mild desire to stay out of war, but not the determination we have today."

POLICE QUELL RELIEF CLIENTS

Hungry Clevelanders Clamor for Food as City Fears New Disorders.

wil be as little suffering as possible," said Sidney Rowley, assistant relief commissioner. "We don't want to have children suffering. It is not that we don't sympathize with those adults who have no food. We feel that they can stand the strain of going hungry better than children."

Others of the city's 24,000 relief cases—each case represents 3.7 per cent persons—were fed on limited funds made available by a ruling of State Attorney General Thomas J. Herbert releasing $350,000 of the state's surplus utilities excise tax collections for relief purposes.

Rowley said he was attempting the "almost impossible task" of making present funds go far enough to feed "the most needy and helpless" until Jan. 1. Burton said he would "destroy" essential city services before permitting anyone to starve.

The mayor summoned his cabinet into emergency session and asked Congress of Industrial Organizations officials to co-operate in feeding the hungry. Through the Chamber of Commerce he asked manufacturers to employ as many relief clients as possible. Previously he had asked for additional state highway jobs, WPA appropriations and installation of the federal relief stamp plan.

PROBE BLAST IN FIREWORKS FIRM

Officials Investigate Man's Death, Destruction of Buildings.

COLUMBUS—(AP)—State Fire Marshal Ray Gill will be asked to aid an investigation of an explosion at a fireworks plant that killed one man, Coroner E. E. Smith said today.

The blast leveled two buildings at the Columbus Imperial Fireworks company on the northeast side of the city yesterday, killing Joseph Caccavello, 60, proprietor of the firm.

The northeastern section of the city was rocked by the blast, which apparently occurred in a building in which Caccavello was working with flash powder. Firemen extinguished a subsequent fire before flames reached a squat concrete structure containing 400 pounds of powder.

TELL BILL GOODBYE + + + + + +

By MARIE BLIZARD

(Copyright, 1939.)

CHAPTER EIGHT

Fabienne looked at her wristwatch. It was after six. For no reason that she was aware of, she thought of something that she had not remembered since she was a schoolgirl. She had always hated the hour of six. It had been her lonesome hour. Her mother had always been dressing then, her governesses having their dinners. She'd been lonesome for love then, for someone to love her. She hadn't thought of love as such in all these years and it was disturbing. Not at all like Fabienne Seymour. She said, "If you must have an answer, Doctor, it's love for myself."

"I can hardly believe that," he said, flipping his cigaret out the open window. "You ought to talk it over with a good psychologist."

Fabienne got up and pushed the desk chair into place.

"I didn't mean to presume," he said. In his tone there was conciliation that she could not reject.

She smiled for him then. "I didn't think you were. But you medical men are so knee-deep in problems you just naturally have to tack them onto normal people, don't you?"

He ducked, laughing.

"Next time I'll be better prepared for an answer. I'd hate to let you down."

"An answer?" he asked.

"About my motivations."

"I'll take you up on it," he said. "By the way, you might send the porter in here to clean up. Good night."

"Good night," she said.

She went up to her own office and looked out the window. He was getting into a small car as she watched. She thought: he might have asked me if he could drop me somewhere. Then she shrugged her shoulders. But she couldn't shrug away the memory of him.

* * *

That meant that Fabienne had a whole week, with a long weekend in between, to wait to see Dr. Mallory again.

It was a week that she could have lifted out of her life and put in a frame. For the first time in her life she experienced anticipation. It was something that stole over her sweetly at unexpected moments and possessed her utterly. In those moments all her senses were quickened. It was a physical thing that made her aware of the breath in her body, the acceleration of her pulse, the beating of her heart. It was something that laid a touch on her making her cheeks glow and her eyes soften. It was something that made her look long and critically into her mirror in an effort to see herself as he might have seen her.

"Arrogant! Completely impossible!" she said distastefully to the mirrored reflection.

It had never happened to her before. This wanting just to look at a man again, to hear his voice, to have him touch her.

In her twenty-four years she had met many men whom she had found attractive, but none like this man who could make her heart beat faster just by thinking of him.

She had met handsome men, heroes, princes, earls and millionaires, and claimed them for her own. She was admittedly the most popular girl in whatever crowd she moved. She had only to lift the telephone—or her eyes—to the man who attracted her and the conquest was hers. And once they were conquests, she was done with them. She was bored.

But this man would be no easy conquest. She qualified the word with "easy."

This man, she thought, would not bore her because he would not let her be, his world. He had a world of his own and she wanted to know what it was—that vast world of medicine—and look into it with him.

She didn't say that to herself at the beginning of that week of waiting. No, she told herself that she was piqued because he was the only man she had ever met who had treated her as he did.

But the week went on.

* * *

She went to the movies one night with Ken Hemingway. They saw a picture in which the hero was a physician. Sitting there in the darkened theater with Ken, Fabienne saw, not the cinema actor, but Dr. Mallory. Her finger tips tingled and when they came out of the theater she called herself an idiot for going romantic on herself.

If she was going romantic, she was going it headlong, for she soon gave herself up to thinking about him when she was with others and wanting to be alone to think of him.

On the borderland of sleep she tried to recall his face and found that it was blurred. She had only a SENSE of it.

Once she caught herself on the verge of asking Miss Huxley about him. Where did he practice? Was he successful? With what hospital was he affiliated? But she dared not give herself away.

She had no interest that whole week outside of Willoughby house. She would cheerfully have stayed there for sixteen hours a day. He might come in at any moment and she not be there to see him!

It was sheer idiocy. It was madness. It was terrible. It was wonderful.

She frowned upon her expensive drawing room in the hotel, envisioning him there in one of her chairs. She filled the room with flowers daily and debated getting some of Gertrude's things from the apartment rented to the Derwents. She bought a hostess gown the blue of the sky, with a flash of silver like the swoop of a gull's wing slashing the length of its floating skirt. She put it on and inspected it as if it were a wedding gown. Then she put it away to wait.

And she had conversations with herself, imagining herself talking to him, asking him about his work, telling him the truth about herself.

For with all this she was learning something about herself and why she had gone to Willoughby house.

"All right, Miss Seymour," she said to herself, "Granted that your motive was almost a spite motive going there to work. Deeper than that there might have been something more gold than brass. It was selfish, yes, but who am I to question my subconscious self?"

At that point in her monologue, Sue Achincloss rang up to ask her to play bridge. Fabienne was glad to accept.

It was only Wednesday and she had never waited for anything in her life before. She'd always been able to fill in the rare lulls. ("Hello, Ned? . . . This is Fabienne Seymour . . . How sweet of you to remember me! I rang up to see if you'd come and have a cocktail with me and some other people tomorrow? . . . Good!") And waiting was all she could do.

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 1939.

Those who argue for "freedom of speech" probably never stop to think that others might enjoy a little freedom of silence.

If, by any chance, you are inclined to feel thankful again tomorrow, it may be merely the telepathic influence from 25 other states that are observing the traditional day.

Bookie joint operators, thrown out of employment by stopping of wire service, are now looking around for some other illegal way to collect the living the world owes them.

Letting Browder Talk

YALE UNIVERSITY will likely survive the visit of Earl Browder, American Communist party leader. Browder is under indictment on charges of passport frauds, and a number of educational institutions have refused him permission to speak.

The students at Yale who invited Browder talked it over with President Seymour and faculty members. The authorities agreed not to interfere with the undergraduates' plans.

"The surest method of exposing incompetent charlatanism is to give the charlatan a protected forum," said President Seymour in his inaugural address. "Let us be certain that in our abhorrence of the dictators' mastery of the mind and conscience abroad we do not impose an official censorship at home."

It may be taken for granted that an audience of intelligent young Americans would not be led astray by anything that Earl Browder said at yesterday's forum.

Freedom of speech is so jealously guarded in this country that it is sometimes carried to the extreme of permitting persons of the Browder ilk to propagandize for alien isms, and there is always a question as to just how far this should be allowed to go.

In the Browder case, however, with all of the effort he has made since last August to justify the German-Russian pact, and with his own admissions before the Dies committee in Washington, he has done more to discredit his political ideas than any of his critics have ever done.

Stifling Interstate Commerce

THERE is now going on in this country what Roger Babson calls "a new war between the states," which he thinks is more threatening to the future of the nation than was the conflict of 1861 - 1865. He probably exaggerates, but the situation is certainly lamentable.

He refers to the "unfair state taxes, truck restrictions, ports of entry, agricultural quarantine stations, toll gates and other discriminating barriers that are being erected by individual states against their neighbors."

This sort of thing, as Governor Stark of Missouri says, is "Balkanizing America." It tends to turn one great country into a lot of little countries all quarrelling with each other and trying to bar each other's goods and collect picayune tariffs from each other, instead of co-operating and promoting interstate commerce according to the old, free practice which made this country rich.

One of the surest things in the world is that such interference with the normal channels of American trade will make the country poor. These short-sighted efforts to collect from neighboring states and prevent the free distribution of goods and services may have been contributing factors in the depression and unemployment.

Telling Students About Trains

AN ITEM in yesterday's News-Journal told of a group of Ashland high school students being introduced to railroad travel in a 20-minute trip from here to Ashland.

Here's an idea that seems worthwhile. It was planned to show the students how Pullman berths are made up; how food is cooked and served aboard a modern train, and other interesting things about train travel.

Believe it or not, many adults dread the thought of a train trip, especially if it involves use of a sleeping car berth—and more particularly if it is an "upper" that is to be negotiated.

In this motorized era millions of people have grown up without any more than a hazy idea of train travel and railroad management has, in the main, been doing very little about it.

Restoration of a 2-cent per mile fare on eastern railroads, more general adoption of popular-priced meals on dining cars, and an intelligently conducted educational campaign devoted to presenting the advantages of train travel, might go a long way toward helping solve some of the railroads' present financial problems by producing increased passenger revenues.

Majority Must Be Self-Sustaining

WHATEVER may be thought of public pensioning for elderly persons who are not financially able to meet their own needs, young persons should keep in mind that a large majority of people will continue to be dependent on their own resources throughout their lifetime—for a majority of non-producers cannot be sustained by a working minority.

There is nothing more tragic than the spectacle of a man who once had a good job and a sizable bank account reaching a penniless old age, as is not an uncommon experience. It is a matter of record that a majority of people who have reached the age of 65 are dependent on relatives, friends or public charity for their existence.

Wasted money, foolish speculation, unanticipated misfortune—many things may have been contributing causes to this condition. But the fact remains that first responsibility for support of self and dependents rests upon individuals and that a program of earning and saving should be on the basis of providing for the future as well as the present.

A self-sustaining majority can provide, within reasonable bounds, for the essential needs of aged unfortunates, but, in the long run, it must be assumed that each head of a family is obligated to provide for that family.

Another Big Job

THE vast misery inflicted on millions of people by the cruelty of dictators calls for relief again on a vast scale. Eleanor Roosevelt nominates Herbert Hoover to head an international agency to help refugees and civilian war sufferers.

It seems a timely suggestion and, as Mrs. Roosevelt says, Mr. Hoover is probably the best qualified man for the job. In the last big war he brought stranded Americans home, fed the Belgians, and at the close of the war administered international relief on a scale never matched before or since.

A newly invented bagpipe will play when plugged into a light socket—but you don't have to do that.

Watching Trends

—By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON — The death of Justice Pierce Butler gives President Roosevelt his fifth appointment to the supreme court and there is a better than average chance he may have an opportunity to appoint one and perhaps two more.

The health of Chief Justice Hughes is such that he has given up all social activities, although of all the members he was the most socially inclined. He has not reduced one iota the staggering amount of work that falls upon a Chief Justice. Observers who know his disposition express the belief that if a time arrives when he cannot accomplish his full quota of work with his old assurance, he will retire at once.

The possible retirement of Justice McReynolds has been rumored and forgotten a half dozen times. It is widely believed that he once had definitely made up his mind to remain on the court until after the 1940 elections. That way he could keep open one place for a non-New Deal appointment if the elections should run that way.

Yet with the death of Butler, McReynolds' only persistent associate in dissent is gone. Those two were the survivors of the conservative group which blocked New Deal legislation until the midway course charted by Chief Justice Hughes won the support of Justice Roberts in 1937.

That swung the court majority to the liberal side. McReynolds was bitter at the shift of direction, and his displeasure has been displayed often. To remain on the court will leave him the whole burden of supporting and writing the dissents, a job which had been shared liberally by the more suave, diplomatic Butler.

* * *

Less 'Dignity'.

THE whole personality of the court has changed as markedly as the tone of its opinions on sociological and governmental issues.

The four pre-New Deal members, Hughes, McReynolds, Roberts and Stone, are elderly and dignified, some of them stern. The four Roosevelt appointees, Frankfurter, Reed, Black and Douglas, are far less so, although in court Reed frowns, almost glowers, from the bench. Once behind the velvet curtains that shield them from the court spectators, the four newly appointed members are ebullient, so report comes out.

Except for the gracious though commanding presence of Chief Justice Hughes there are no "outstanding personalities" on the court to rival the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes and the retired Justice Brandeis. So far no close friendships have developed even among the New Dealers like those which characterized that of Holmes with his one time colleagues, Brandeis and the late Chief Justice White.

* * *

Some Disappointment.

IN THE eyes of old time observers, the new members have presented both surprises and disappointments. Justice Black, who took his seat under a rain of criticism for his asserted Klan connections, writes some of the most concise opinions of the court. Justice Douglas, these observers say, has a clear, logical mind akin to Hughes'.

Amazing to some are the wordy, involved opinions of Justice Frankfurter who came to the bench in a smother of praise amounting to adulation. His associates, including the Chief Justice, seem to find his questions from the bench time-consuming and often pointless. Once Chief Justice Hughes silenced him rather peremptorily. The irritable McReynolds has barked at him repeatedly to let the lawyers, and not the court members, present the cases. Other justices have grinned slyly at such chidings.

Layman First Aid Help In Accident.

—By DR. CLENDENING

I AM ASKED by a reader to write an article or two on first aid. I am very glad to do this, although it is rather too large a subject for the one or two articles that I can devote to it.

Roughly, first aid can be divided, as all medical practice is divided, into, first, surgical and, second, medical and obstetrical emergencies.

Surgical emergencies consist, first, of the treatment of open wounds, and second, accidents in which no break in the skin occurs.

The first aid treatment of a simple wound should be known to laymen, and I think by this time is known to all laymen. It consists in covering the wound and making pressure with a sterile dressing. If no sterile dressing is available, a newly-laundered handkerchief, towel or napkin is sterile enough for all practical purposes.

Simple cuts and abrasions in the home should have an antiseptic such as tincture of iodine or mercurochrome dabbed on the open surface before the sterile dressing is applied.

Also In Automobile.

Incidentally, we are always advised to put first aid equipment in the bathroom closet, but we seldom think of equipping the automobile with a first aid kit of sterile bandages, adhesive and antiseptics for such simple cases as I have mentioned.

The first aid treatment of hemorrhage is known to all Boy Scouts and they will tell you quite correctly that there are two kinds of hemorrhage, venous and arterial. The arterial hemorrhage spurts blood and requires a tourniquet or constriction above the point of hemorrhage. The venous hemorrhage is oozy and requires merely firm pressure with gauze bandage or towel.

In the absence of a tourniquet, the hand wrapped around an arm or pressure against an artery of the neck or thigh will act as a tourniquet until help comes.

Sounds Simple.

This all sounds very simple, but in actual practice surgeons themselves cannot always tell the difference between venous and arterial hemorrhage. But if the diagnosis is puzzling, mere pressure, if firm enough, will control any kind of hemorrhage.

In accidents which do not involve open wounds, probably the best piece of advice that can be given the layman is to do as little as possible. He especially should not move the patient until professional aid can be procured.

I saw a harrowing result of meddlesome action on the part of bystanders this summer when a boy fell from a tree. Someone picked him up suddenly, allowing his head to hang down, a maneuver which fractured his backbone.

Go American Again!

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

"OUT OF THE MOUTHS OF BABES" etc.—comes many a jolt for what ails us. Here's young Alfred P. Higgins, of Los Angeles, Cal. with a well-aimed poke at our present educational drift—and a cry that should set the drums a-beating in your blood.

"DOWN WITH THESE WHITE COLLAR STANDARDS! WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH OLD-FASHIONED, AMERICAN HARD WORK?"

Says Alfred: "For the last few years, we have been slowly but surely incorporating an ancient European fallacy in our schools. That is, we've been adopting the old English caste system of Gentleman versus Manual Worker. Under this code, no matter how little you did or how poorly you did it, you were Top Man provided you wore a white collar, and were entitled to lord it over the underdog who performed manual chores, irrespective of his job or salary.

"Now this plan might work in England where the "gentleman's superiority" was based on the low wages and servile acquiescence of the "laboring class" who handed on their mediocrity, generation after generation. But it certainly has no place in a Democratic America where—theoretically, at least—each man deserves and has an equal chance. Yet the English plan was sold to us in every possible way. Smart Americans were all supposed to be "gentlemen." So we all took clerical jobs, rode the streetcar after a hurried breakfast, read the morning paper and reached the office ready for a pinch of soda. Then we would sit all day chasing elusive figures through machines and in and out of books.

"And what did it buy most of us? Exactly nothing. We became small time cashiers with big time aspirations in a nation of supposed democracy—the most miserable people on earth.

"What's the answer? I know, for most of us—work. Common labor. Work with the old American pride in honestly skillful craftsmanship. What's wrong with being a carpenter or plumber at better than a dollar an hour? What's the matter with working hard all day, at twice the wages you make in a swivel chair, coming home tired, but happy, and with an appetite instead of indigestion? Figuratively speaking, we haven't had any new carpenters, plumbers, or tradesmen for the past ten years and the old timers are getting scarce.

"The old-time work field has become a frontier, needing pioneers. If we start at the bottom in some trade, work hard, use the education and the experiences that we've had, we will reap the harvest our pioneer fathers reaped.

"Whether we reach the top in the trades or not, it is a probable fact that we'll make more money, and be in better health, so in the end we will be further ahead. Let us use our excess adrenalin to build a nation—not with dreams, but with labor."

Alfred P. Higgins—age 28, Los Angeles, Calif.

Well, why not?

You're "bringing up your boy to be a gentleman." But what is a gentleman? A smirking mannekin with synthetic standards and puppet gestures? OR AN HONEST HUMAN BEING—EFFICIENT AND SELF-RESPECTING . . .

No kidding ourselves—our present educational system is founded, and not so remotely, on the caste system of England; the system which bases a gentleman's life on the poorly paid but more efficient worker's labors. Have we any place in America for a creed like that? Is it leading us on to a higher, nobler plane of living . . . or is it insidiously undermining the faith and equality, courage and brotherly love which made us what we were in our Great Day?

Getting down to cases—WOULD YOU RATHER HAVE YOUR BOY BE A POORLY PAID BUT "SCENIC" GENTLEMAN WITH A DRAWING ROOM PATTER? OR A TWO-FISTED WORKER WITH THE OLD AMERICAN STANDARDS AND THE OLD AMERICAN WALLOP, AND PROBABLY TWICE THE INCOME?

Think it over—then tell us. This column would like to know.

WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—If Senators Wheeler and Vandenberg really investigate the faulty construction of the navy's brand new warships, they will find a lot of interesting things which the public and congress never has heard about.

They will find, for instance, a sort of social registry within the bureaus of "Engineering" and of "Construction and Repair" whereby 110 commissioned officers rule the roost. Under them, and distinctly subordinate regarding both authority and social position, are the civilian architects and engineers. Chief difference is that one group went to Annapolis and the other did not.

The civilian naval architects are among the best in the country, some of their names are well known throughout the ship-building industry. And in previous years some of these civilians used to be in charge of technical sections. Recently, however, more and more Annapolis graduates have come ashore to supersede them.

No one in the navy is shouting about it, but the flaws just discovered in the new destroyers were suspected by these civilian architects and engineers. The private shipbuilders also questioned the destroyers' designs, fearing they would be top-heavy. However, the 110 commissioned officers are not accustomed to having their word challenged, and their instructions were carried out.

Result: About 20 of the 28 new destroyers will have to have their keels leaded to keep them from rolling over in the water.

* * *

What Price Ships?

ANOTHER point which the senate may want to investigate is the high cost of ship-building. Twenty years ago, just at the end of the World war, a destroyer cost $900,000 to $1,000,000. Since 1919, the cost of labor and building materials has gone down, not up. Yet the navy is now paying $4,000,000 to $5,000,000 for its destroyers. The new destroyers are bigger and improved. But this does not account for all of the tremendous boost in price.

The price of a battleship also has mounted, so that one battleship now costs as much as the entire Rockefeller Radio City in New York.

Acting Naval Secretary Edison is doing his best to bring greater efficiency to the navy, and has appointed two good men, Admirals A. H. Van Keuren and S. M. Robinson in charge of Construction and Repair and the Bureau of Engineering. Aside from three men at the top, however, there has been practically no change among the 110 other commissioned officers who have been planning new U. S. warships. They remain on the job despite their mistakes.

Minister In Dutch.

AMERICAN Minister to the Hague, George Gordon, who has been doing a good job of reporting the Dutch crisis to Roosevelt, is famous as one of the most quick-tempered men in the diplomatic service.

Some time ago, he was blowing off steam to the under secretary of the Dutch foreign office, who, after listening good-naturedly, remarked: "Do you always get as mad about everything as you do about this?"

Gordon, not knowing whether to be sore or not, finally sputtered: "No. My wife always tells me not to get mad. And I try terribly hard not to. But—oh well, here I am again."

* * *

Jimmy (Duke) Cromwell.

ALL signs point to the prospect of Jimmy Cromwell being the next senator from New Jersey. Jimmy, in case you don't remember him, is the husband of Doris Duke, inheritor of the Duke tobacco fortune and probably the richest woman in the world.

Jimmy Cromwell doesn't entirely deserve to be identified merely as Doris' husband, because he is something of a person in his own right, being the son of Mrs. Edward Stotesbury, and having a better than-agerage quota of public spirit.

Also Jimmy has written a book. And it was this book which completely upset his senatorial ambitions in 1938. At that time, Mayor Frank Hague, Democratic boss of New Jersey and Jimmy's political impresario, had him all set to run for the senate. Then suddenly, Hague learned about the book.

Mayor Hague has nothing against literature, and has even learned to tolerate CIO leaflets distributed in Jersey City. But Jimmy Cromwell's book was dynamite.

In it he advocated a sales tax and also birth control. Both are political poison. So, much to Hague's painful regret at having to give up such a lush campaign pool, he had to break the bad news to Jimmy that he was "out" as a candidate.

But now Hague and his lieutenants figure that by 1940 the ill-omened book will have been forgotten and that with the Duke fortune behind him, Jimmy is just the man to challenge multi-millionaire Republican Senator W. Warren Barbour. A battle of millionaires is sweet music to the Hague machine. The pickings have been none too lush in recent years, and some Hague followers are confidently expecting Jimmy to kick in "250 grand."

* * *

Grooming Cromwell.

MEANWHILE, under Hague's expert guidance, Jimmy is being built up as a popular candidate.

At the Hyde Park cornerstone ceremonies, he accompanied Hague and mixed genially with the throng—special attention being given to newsmen. Soon, according to the inside word, just the right kind of a forum will be found for him to make just the right—kind of a speech.

Also, the Cromwells will not go to their newly-built Hawaiian palace this winter, but will remain at their million dollar estate near Somerville, N. J., where political wheels already are turning. Local jobless have been put to work on various conservation projects which Jimmy has dubbed the DDWA—Doris Duke Works Administration.

The ornate Somerville estate, with its vast lawns, wondrous gardens, ponds and pools made a deep impression on Mayor Hague during a recent visit there with Governor Harry Moore, another of his proteges. After a jaunt about the place, Hague turned to Moore and remarked in an awed voice:

"Boy, what a place for a clambake!"

* * *

Merry-Go-Round.

ALSO on Mayor Hague's list of super-respectable New Jersey candidates is Acting Naval Secretary Charles Edison. However, Edison is not leaving the navy yet—though he is interested in the governorship. . . . On Secretary Hull's Georgia holiday, his two sport recreations were playing croquet and golf putting. Mrs. Hull was his only partner. . . . A letter addressed to the "Fur Department, Wasnington, D. C.," was delivered to the state department. The writer wanted to know about the silver fox industry.

Hunting Accident

(A FARMER'S DIARY)

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

AS I DROVE home from town with a trailer load of apples just after sundown, five hunters and two dogs came down the weedy trail to the main road. A young man, a boy, a woman and two girls were in the company. Hunters are a common sight now among these hills, where thick new growth of underbrush affords shelter for much game. Shots ring out frequently from dawn to dark, and if a man did not know that it is fun and healthful sport that brings the gunners out, he could well imagine he was listening to a skirmish in Europe.

I had stopped at the side of our lawn, when a girl rushed up in excitement and exclaimed, "Could you come and take somebody to the doctor? My sister's shot! They phoned for Dad, but maybe they can't get hold of him and she ought to get help right away."

"When did it happen?" I asked, working as fast as I could to unhitch the loaded trailer from my car.

"Just now, back over the hill there. We got her down to the road, and she's waiting there among the weeds. She was hit in the neck and the side of the face. She's all bloody . . . it's awful."

"How did it happen?" I queried as we went down.

"She was walking down below in the brush, and the rest of us were up above. I don't know how it happened, but a gun went off and we heard the shot scatter and then she screamed. We were all out for some fun with the dogs and guns . . . if she's crippled or much hurt I'll never want to hunt no more in my while life. It was terrible to see her bleeding like that . . . so long's I live I'll never forget it."

"Did you give her first aid?" I asked.

"No—we hadn't none with us. Nobody ever thought of us having an accident. We were so anxious to get going that we didn't have time for anything but the guns, the dogs and ourselves. And when it happened we were too excited to think what was best to do."

The wounded girl stood along the road, much disturbed, but saying very little. She got into my car and we had started west to a doctor's when her companion shouted "There comes Dad!"

They helped her out of my car and her father quickly sped her away to a physician. The rest of the party loaded their dogs into a car and followed. I hoped the village doctor would be in town.

Finland Prepares Reply to Soviet.

HELSINKI — (AP) — Finland accused by the Soviet Union of menacing Leningrad and actually trying to invade Russian territory—prepared a reply today which may determine the next turn in the war of nerves and notes

A draft of the answer to the Russian charge of "profound hostility of the government of Finland towards the Soviet Union," which Moscow cited as grounds last night for denunciation of the Finnish-Russian nonaggression pact, was completed about midnight.

The cabinet met again shortly before noon to put final touches to the Finnish answer which was expected to be dispatched to Moscow late this afternoon

Officials denied Finland had mobilized her full military strength They declared on the contrary that many reservists recently released had not been called back to the colors

However, there was no inclination to minimize the precarious situation on the Russian-Finnish frontier, where incidents or alleged incidents were multiplying. Border patrols at various points were ordered to move back so as to avoid the possibility of clashes with Russian troops

Grievance procedure will go through regular plant channels but if no settlement is reached will go before the bargaining board. If the board is unable to agree, it was said, a fifth member agreeable to each side will be called in.

ity to provide themselves and their dependents with medical service through voluntary pooling of funds monthly or annually

One of the aims of the profession is to bring the advantages and benefits of preventive medicine and good medical care within the reach of everybody, regardless of economic position," Dr. Smith said.

"The Ohio State Medical association and its 6,400 members are determined to work out constructive methods of assisting these people in meeting their health and medical problems We believe this can be done without placing complete control over public health and medical service in the hands of the federal or state governments.

"We believe the health and medical needs of all Ohio citizens can be met without large expenditures from public funds, involving new and increased taxes without destroying the fundamental right of every person to choose his own physician, without obliterating the patient-doctor relationship, without regimenting either patients or physicians, and without forcing the people to submit to a system of compulsory sickness insurance with its attending evils of waste, extravagance and inefficiency, red tape, and inferior medical care.

"We believe that the health problems of the low-wage earner can be solved by cooperation between him and the doctor of medicine without third-party control and interference.

"If our study points to voluntary pre-paid medical service plans as a practical solution to the problem, it is my opinion that our committees will recommend to the executive board of the association that such a plan or plans be inaugurated under the supervision of the association or one or more of its component county medical societies or academies of medicine"

It was stated that "economic difficulties and uncertainties of recent years" had created certain health-care problems which Ohio physicians hoped to meet Their theory is that most of those in the low income groups "do not seek medical service at public expense"

With MARIANNE

WHAT Christmas present to give someone whose personal tastes and wants are pretty much of a mystery is a problem that occurs at least once on everybody's list—there is always a new in-law or an old friend, both of whom provoke a good deal of head scratching and pondering, it seems, but a quick glance around the downtown stores will prove this to be a needless gesture, because there are all kinds of gift suggestions on display now.

Marianne

* * *

The very newest and most attractive thing out now is "Gone With the Wind" costume jewelry, designed by Ricarde of Hollywood, who has taken the lovely old motifs of Civil war days and wrought inexpressibly charming jewelry for the modern costume. . . . Each of the five of these ensembles—necklace, bracelet, earrings, clip, brooch and ring—seems more stunning than the other. . . . Set in yellow gold, "The Tara" has layer upon layer of sparkling amethysts. . . . Like stars in a field of gold are the sapphires alternating with simulated half pearls in "The Scarlett," while "The Melanie" ensemble is a reproduction of the classic cameo, black on white, with Greek key border etched in black enamel on a dull gold finish. . . . Delicacy of detail distinguishes "The Suellen" design which alternates turquoise and pearl in a dull gold finish. . . . The graceful pattern of "The Robillard" is set with topaz, while "The Twelve Oaks" is an old-fashioned brooch with a white cameo on a background of yellow English gold elaborately chased and enameled. . . . They're all lovely, and probably after you see them, you'll not only want to buy them for your best friend, but put them on your own gift list too!

* * *

One of the leading women cosmetologists in the country has really done herself proud in packaging her best-selling wares for Christmas. . . . There are all kinds of gift boxes combining the ever-appealing, "sweet as spring" Apple Blossom cologne, soap, body powder and sachet. . . . Two bright little bottles of Town and Country perfumes boxed in cellophane would be grand for stuffing someone's stocking, as would the striking Water Lily triple compact which contains powder, rouge and a full-size lipstick which forms the clasp.

* * *

A MUCH appreciated gift at this season is a pair of slippers—and there's such a variety of styles on display downtown now, that you should be able to find a pair to suit the needs and desires of anyone. . . . Satin scuffs are the newest with soft elk soles and gored backs in shades of wine or blue. . . . More dressy slippers with higher heels, trimmed with satin bows, also come in wine and blue. . . . Kid comfies with flat heels can be had in black or blue. . . . Wedge heeled styles as well as others with platform soles can be purchased in these shades. . . . And then for warmth as well as style, woolies are the most popular in white, black, red, blue and burgundy. . . . Corduroys with fur trim and fleece lined kids are also snug and attractive.

* * *

If you think Sister Sue might need a new pair of gloves and would like something a little different from the usual run, how about a quaint pair of black velvet mitts for evening—or white angora ones instead? Fluffs and Muffy mitts in all bright colors will lend a lot to any daytime ensemble too.

* * *

THEY'VE changed the appearance of suede cloth purses this season by trimming them with cedar wood tops—really a grand combination with black, moss green, rust and brown—and they have a pleasant fragrance too!

* * *

THERE are many gift ideas for men on display in the downtown shops now too. . . . Pajamas are always well received, and this year all styles can be purchased in broadcloth, satin, rayon silk and charmeuse—these come in plain colors, patterns and stripes in shades of blue, wine, green, brown and white in lounge, slip-on and coat models.

Note: The styles described above are available in Mansfield shops. You can learn where they may be obtained if you will telephone Marianne at The News-Journal between 1 and 2:30 p. m.—Canal 4251.

S. Farnum Coffin Will Marry Girl From Rochester

Word was received today of the engagement of Miss Emily Jean Powers of Rochester, N. Y., to S. Farnum Coffin, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Scott Farnum Coffin, 43 Hoffman avenue. The engagement was announced recently at a tea, given by Miss Powers' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Pliny H. Powers, at their home in Youngstown.

The affair was attended by 60 guests from this city, Cleveland and Youngstown. The tea table was in a color note of white and pink, with an arrangement of asters, roses and chrysanthemums as a centerpiece between tall white tapers. Mrs. Coffin was among the guests who presided at the table. Mr. Coffin joined his fiancee for the tea, as did his parents and an aunt, Miss Alice Coffin of Cleveland.

Both Miss Powers and Mr. Coffin were graduated from Oberlin college last June, where Miss Powers won Phi Beta Kappa honors. She is now on the staff of the Democrat Chronicle in Rochester, where Mr. Coffin began his medical studies in the School of Medicine and Dentistry at the University of Rochester this fall.
